GOOD RACING AND BALL GAMES DRAW CROWDS AT FAIR

Governor Spoke Tuesday—C. C. C. Defeats West Paris—Thursday Program Postponed to Saturday.

For the first time in its recent history Bethel Fair is holding a three day program. Although today's rain makes it necessary to postpone the day's program to Saturday, indications are that the fair will be a success in every way. On account of the early date the fruit and vegetable departments are sadly lacking, but a small exhibit of fancy work was shown in the "hall" and also poultry, rabbits and cattle on the grounds near by. The awards were not completed Wednesday night, and will be published in full in next week's issue.

A novel feature was the western riding of the Starbuck Brothers, boys from Montana who are now living in Westlock. Their act was presented in front of the grandstand on Tuesday and Wednesday and was well received.

The midway included a chairplane and merry-go-round while long pony rides were given near the judges' stand. There were many other places depicting a variety of acts from corn on cob to ice cream cones, several side shows, human stunts, a howling alley and ten pin game. The loud speaker announcing was good and held much during the races and throughout the program.

EDUCATION

Which is the more important—that we give our boys and girls a secular education or that we teach them God's Word; that we give them a religious education? You hesitate to answer? Put it thus: Are not the opportunities presented to our youth for acquiring a secular education out of all proportion to the facilities provided for religious instruction? Is not the public school program too big and the Bible school program too small? Think it over. Call the roll of those men on whom the nation is laying the burden of responsibility, from the great president of the great republic down, and they will be found, almost without exception to have spent their youth in the atmosphere of a Christian home, a Christian Bible school and a Christian church. The great problems of the world are not economic nor financial, but moral. Since education is an essential in the process that will fit youth for the great tasks, the church must be more interested in the matter of their education.

POTATO CROP TO SUFFER BECAUSE SEED NOT TREATED

It is generally noted that an unusual amount of skips appeared in potato fields early this year. While there are probably several causes the most prominent one scientists believe, is the result of infection of Rhizoctonia on the seed piece at planting time. Low prices have curtailed the practice of seed treating. The new quick dip with corrosive sublimate should result in the return of the practice and the control of the disease.

CHEVROLET, AMERICA'S NUMBER 1 CAR—47.99% of all low-priced cars sold

NUMBER 2 CAR—26.74%

NUMBER 3 CAR—19.21%

*Based on the latest retail registration figures from R. L. Park & Company (all states for five full months). Since January first Chevrolet has sold in excess of 370,000 passenger cars and trucks.

People have come to expect Chevrolet to lead the world in automobile sales. But this year, Chevrolet has done even more than that. According to the latest available figures, Chevrolet alone has sold almost as many cars this year as the rest of the low-price field combined!

When a car looms above its field like that, there can't be any argument about it. It must be an all-round better buy. And that's exactly what Chevrolet offers you. Fisher bodies with the new ventilation system and the strongest and quietest body construction of the day—solid steel over a sturdy hardwood frame.* A valve-in-head six engine, unapproached for economy...

Cushion-Balanced to blot out vibration... full of snap and vigor—altogether the most efficient engine in the low-price field.

Then there's Synchro-Mesh with Silent Second—the Starterator—Simplified Free Wheeling, the Octane Selector, long, parallel-mounted springs—more advancements than we have space to describe. And Chevrolet prices are as low as $445.

Don't guess—buy from the leader. Get a car that has been proved sound and dependable by more owners than any other automobile you can buy. CHEVROLET MOTOR CO., DETROIT, MICH. All prices f. o. b. Flint, Mich. Special equipment extra. Low delivered prices and easy G.M.A.C. terms.

PROHIBITION

In Canada all the liquor sold, both by government and by private licensees, is purchased from privately owned breweries, distilleries and wineries, who are busy producing the alcoholic beverages distributed under the government system. So far as the liquor-making trade is concerned, there is no doubt of its booming prosperity. But how this prosperity affects the people and legitimate industry is another story. Mussolini has done nothing more revolutionary in Italy; Hitler has done nothing more revolutionary in Germany; Stalin has done nothing more revolutionary in Russia; than the action of Congress in releasing by a majority vote of its members a flood of beer, prohibited by an amendment to the Constitution, ratified by forty-six of the forty-eight states, while the question of its repeal is pending.

Congress would balance the budget at the expense of the youth of the nation; it refused even to protect those who were under sixteen years of age from this habit-forming drug.

Dr. Saleeby, noted British physician, says, "Beer is a devitalized, devitalized, drugged, decayed, impoverished food, and is nothing under the sun but poisoned water."

"It is nonsense to claim that beer is a hygienic drink. It is drunk chiefly for its alcoholic effect, and is the alcoholic effect is produced the danger of alcohol exists."

Dr. Eugene Lyman Fisk.
Arthur Brisbane in the wel-known Hearst newspapers said, the day after the election, "It is pathetic that the richest nation in the world should rely for the solution of the monopoly problem on a slave of beer and the amount the drinker can be taxed."

Who will pay the beer bill? The family in lessened comforts, lessened food, lessened clothing, lessened happiness, lessened happiness, lessened respect, lessened money for education.

A large bull moose was seen by George Swan of Dixfield recently while on his way to Weld. The moose was standing on the main road near the Wells River bridge.
It is said that the antlers were about four feet across and that the weight was about 1200 pounds.

season in Portland. Mr. Dadmun has a voice of unusual richness, mellowness and range. This, combined with his poetic appreciation and natural musical sensibility, puts him on the roll of great American artists. Mr. Dadmun, who has appeared as soloist with all the leading orchestras and symphony societies of the country, is truly American in both training and in spirit and his career is an outstanding example of national musical merit and achievement.

Wilfred Tremblay, well known as an accomplished Portland pianist and teacher, will be at the piano to accompany all the artists.
The chorus will be composed of former Festival singers from all over the State, as well as the local chorus from the camp. The orchestra and band are all members of the camp.

The program to be given under Dr. Chapman's direction will open with one of his own compositions,
"Waldorf-Astoria March," played by the orchestra. This will be followed by Handel's Hallelujah Chorus from the Messiah by the ensemble chorus and the orchestra; and the recitative and aria "Every Valley" from the same oratorio, rendered by William V. Bradley.

After two orchestral selections
"Adagio" and "Minuetto" from Suite L'Arlésienne by Bizet, Erle Renwick will sing "Il Balen" from Verdi's opera, Il Trovatore. The orchestra will play Overture 1812 by P. Tschalkowski preceding the Inflammatus from Stabat Mater with Gladys Russell Cook as soloist and the chorus.

Mr. Dadmun has chosen to sing the Prologue from I Pagliacci by Leoncavallo and Lucille Potter the "Cari Nome" from Verdi's Rigo-letto.

The Sextette from Lucia di Lammermoor, Donzetti, will be rendered by Mrs. Cook, Miss Carter, Mr. Bradley, Wesley J. Lewis,
Mr. Renwick and Harold Furlong.
The concert will close with John Philip Sousa's stirring march,
"Stars and Stripes Forever," by the orchestra and band.

Among the many distinguished guests who are expected to be present will be Mrs. William Rogers Chapman, who is to wear the charming white hat and gown in which she appeared at the white breakfast of the Rubenstein Club of New York City on May 6, celebrating her 25th year as presiding officer of the organization.

All the Artists appearing are giving their services and the proceeds realized from the concert will be devoted to the music camp.

NOBILITY

Alice Carey

True worth is being, not seeming,
In doing each day that goes by Some little good, not in dreaming
Of great things to do by and by.
For whatever men say in blindness,
And spite of the fancied youth,
There is nothing so kindly as kindness,
And nothing so royal as truth.
We get back our mete as we measure,
We can not do wrong and feel right;
Nor can we give pain and gain pleasure,
For justice avenges each slight.
The air for the wing of the sparrow,
The bush for the robin and wren,
But always the path that is narrow
And straight for the children of men.

'Tis not in the pages of the story
The heart of its ill to beguile, Though he who makes courtship to glory
Gives all that he hath for her smile;
For when from her heights he has won her,
Alas! it is only to prove
That nothing's so sacred as honor,
And nothing so loyal as love!

We can not make bargains for blisses,
Nor catch them like fishes in nets;
And sometimes the thing our life misses Helps more than the thing which it gets.
For good lieth not in pursuing,
Nor gaining of great nor of small,
But just in the doing, and doing
As we would be done by, is all.

Through envy, through malice,
Through hating,
Against the world, early and late,
No lot of our courage abating,
Our part is to work and to wait,
And slight is the sting of his trouble
Whose winnings are less than his worth;
For he who is honest is noble,
Whatever his fortune or birth.

A LITTLE PRAYER

S. E. Kiser

That I may not in blindness grope,
But that I may with vision clear Know when to speak a word of hope
Or add a little wholesome cheer.
That tempered winds may softly blow
Where little children, thinly clad,
Sit dreaming, when the flame is low,
Of comforts they have never had.
That through the year which lies ahead
No heart shall ache, no cheek be wet,
For any word that I have said
Or profit I have tried to get.

IT IS NOT

OPPORTUNITY

Walter Malone

They do me wrong who say I come no more When once I knock and fail to find you in;
For every day I stand outside your door,
And bid you wake, and rise to fight and win.

Wait not for precious chances passed away, Weep not for golden ages on the wane!
Each night I burn the records of the day—
At sunrise every soul is born again!

Laugh like a boy at splendors that have sped,
To vanished joys be blind and deaf and dumb;
My judgments seal the dead past with its dead,
But never blind a moment yet to come.

Though deep in mire, wring not your hands and weep;

I lend my arm to all who say "I can!"
No shame-faced outcast ever sank so deep,
But yet may rise and be again a man!"

Dost thou behold thy lost youth all aghast?
Dost reel from righteous Retri-bution's blow?
Then turn from blotted archives of the past,
And find the future's pages white as snow.
Art thou a mourner? Rouse thee from thy spell;
Art thou a sinner? Sins may be forgiven;
Each morning gives thee wings to fly from hell,
Each night a star to guide thy feet to heaven.

Brick Buys a Kimono

By KATHLEEN MALLORY

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
WNU Service

BRICK had first seen the kimono two weeks ago. It wasn't really a kimono. That was just Brick's appellation. It was really a gorgeous blue chiffon velvet peignoir. Mr. Bonner had brought it. It was late at night, and Brick had tiptoed to the kitchen for a drink of water.

Drinking the water, he had overheard Mr. Bonner talking to Mumsy. He liked Mr. Bonner. He never forgot to bring him something. It was always there on the breakfast table next morning. The most wonderful things. He was listening. "Jerry, you angel. . . . It's too sweet of you for words, but I can't let you. You're a darling. . . . the best friend a woman ever had. But it's impossible. . . . I'll shut my eyes and pretend. . . . forever after that ragged, shabby old thing in there!"

Brick's breath expelled on a long breath that was almost a sob. He peeked through the crack of the swinging door to the living room. His mother began folding it carefully back into its tissue wrappings. "Don't be absurd, Sylvia." Jerry some Bonner was speaking, gruffly. "That's my birthday gift to you. I shall be next month, and I wanted you to have it in time."

"Please, Jerry," Brick's mother said thickly, "Don't. Bring me some little trinket that's inexpensive."

"Sylvia. . . . let me take care of you. . . . always! Please, dear. I love you so."

"Now, Jerry! You know how things are. I'm going to bring Brick up, first. My first duty is to him. And. . . . why Jerry, I've a fine young man to take care of me. I want nothing in this world, beyond my home, here, and Brick!"

Brick had crept off to bed, shivering. Gosh. She had said he was enough.

Then he saw it again. Three days later. It was in a shop window, and there was nothing else there. Only the blue kimono. Some way, somehow, he must get that blue kimono for mumsy.

He went in and priced it. He nearly fell over when the lady said twenty-five dollars. She might as well have said twenty-five hundred. Gosh. That was the same price as the bicycle.

But now the bike was forgotten. Each night, when he was through peddling his papers, he went to stare, fascinated, at the blue kimono. Mumsy's birthday was next week, too.

Then several things happened. Mumsy was working in a store, part time, and he was alone one night. In the closet, looking for a book stored away he came across the picture. It was his father, he knew that. Mumsy had told him. Her eyes had looked all scrutiny when she told him. He never asked her any more about him. But he knew he was alive.

Then one day Brick's father brought a paper from him. Brick knew him instantly. The same face, only the hair was gray now. Expensive fur coat. Costly clothes. "A Post, sonny. Keep the change!"—two dimes.

The day before mumsy's birthday, the man stopped again. It was cold. Brick's fingers were numb with cold. He dropped his papers, and his hat fell off. The man bit off an explanation. "My God," he said, "the same hair event!" Then hoarsely, "Here, Sonny. . . . get yourself something. A like. . . . shoes!" Brick stared at the fifty dollar bill, as the man jumped into a taxi and drove off. Only that noon he had seen the man's smiling face in the tabloids he had sold along State street. "Noted actor celebrates new hit by marrying leading lady."

He began to shiver, but not with cold. Frantically, he searched his paper bag and found the tabloid: the last remaining one. There it was, "State Street Theater," Brick started toward State street. He borrowed an envelope from the cashier. On it, he wrote his own name. It was also his father's. He knew that, now, from the tabloids. Brick Chandler, star of New Moon. Inside, he tucked the fifty-dollar bill. It was his defeated hope of ever owning the blue kimono or the new bike. But he did not falter, mumsy would want him to.

On the way he saw the sign. "We buy old bikes." Brick went in. He came out, minus his dilapidated old bike, but richer by ten dollars. He'd get another, some day. Now he'd get mumsy a birthday present. A blue kimono.

Brick raced to the shop. He nearly suffocated with joy. Marked down to nineteen fifty!

He stole into the house. In the hall, a glittering object arrested him. It was a new bike. It was the New Bike. But Brick didn't stop. He took the stairs on high.

"Hey, Mom! Hey, Looky! I bought you a present!" "Brick, you angel!" Sylvia held up the blue peignoir. Tears sparkled in her lashes. "Brick, it's the most divine thing! How did you dream I wanted one?" Brick swaggered. He strutted.

"Oh. . . . girls like a kimono," he said nonchalantly.

SUNDER JOSHI

Who Will Tell About His Native Country at West Bethel Church

WEST PARIS

A very pleasant occasion was the party given Percy C. Mayhew at his camp, Lakeview Locke Mills, on Wednesday evening. Mr. Mayhew is taking a vacation from J. B. Ham Co.'s grain mill, and being at camp the conditions were favorable for the 44 Class Band to go to the home of their leader at Locke Mills. The first intimation of their approach was when they marched to his house in their white uniforms lighted by the autos following. Nearly 50 people were present and the evening was happily spent with music and sociability. Delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. Mayhew. Mr. Mayhew was generously remembered with gifts.

CHAPTER X

Ben Sutton Proposes.

CYNTHIA had resolved to marry Ben Sutton.

It was the only sensible thing of course, she assured herself. Here was a charming man, adored her, who asked nothing of her but to transport her entire life to his home and spend the rest of his life making everybody else's Christmas.

Christmas was almost upon them. They would go home for Christmas after Christmas.

Ben walked coated with ice, or melting in slush, the girl thought. She and months till spring. Cary losing his job again. Flossie settling down for the rest of her life. The sleeping. Oh, me! I just can't!

It was in her own room and she went to the closet, opening its doors. There was black chiffon with the translucent pink frills at the neck and small puffed sleeves. She had that dress up for a song. She had a good time. She wore it to the Lexington for the New York nov-

It turned out Ben knew him. They chatted cordially of night and the Bronx Arts party, and famous British actress whom had both met—Cynthia had thrilled with Ben that night. He stroked the mink collar of a coat. If she married Ben in spring by next winter she would have a snub coat. Sables were one of her dreams. Even furs might be a trifle vulgar, but they were so gorgeous!

"I've enjoyed my visit to Denver," he remarked. "It's the first holiday I've taken in three years. I'd like to drive across the Divide."

"It's interesting," she assented.

"Perhaps I'll come back next spring."

Ah, now he was approaching his subject. Cynthia sighed a little. She wished he'd forego the preliminaries and get to the most important part of the interview.

But apparently he decided to attack from another angle.

"Benji sent you his love in the letter I got today, Cynthia."

"He's a dear little boy," she answered warmly.

And then all at once Ben buried himself on to his subject. "Benji needs a mother, Cynthia, and I need a wife. Could you—could you give me—er tonight?"

After that... for her. She must have told Ben what he wanted to hear because he sprang from his seat and took her in his arms. She remembered that his lips felt very queer on her own, that she turned her head when he tried to kiss her again.

"Not—now," she stammered. "Let me get a little used to you, Ben!"

They stayed in the library for hours, planning. At least Ben told her what he had planned and she agreed. It turned out that it was April tenth and not May first that was to be her wedding day. Also it seemed that Ben had taken a chance on her accepting him; taken it even before he left New York. He took a little velvet box from his pocket and with a tender smile opened it and showed her the enormous diamond within.

"But what if I'd refused you, Ben?" she asked.

"I'd have flung it out of the train window going home," he said. That pleased her, but her approval was short lived for he added thoughtfully: "I might have saved it and given it to Benji for his wife!"

Everything was decided when they left the library. The gift shop was to be sold at once. Cary and Flossie were to come East directly after Christmas. "I've exactly the right opening for the boy."

Everything was settled, so Cynthia raised her face dutifully for a good-night kiss and went soberly to bed.

Geoff came in just as she reached the top of the stairs. The light from the upper hall caught the diamond on her hand and threw it back in a hundred rays of red and green.

Cynthia carried Geoff's huggard face into her room and it haunted her dreams.

The next day—would Cynthia ever live long enough to forget the next day? She thought not.

It began with the sight of her ring at breakfast. Tenny asked her where she got it. Miss Nona took her daughter into a tearful embrace, kissed Ben warmly. The Captain beamed like a rising sun and pumped the easterner's hand. Cary looked more startled than pleased and Flossie said nothing at all.

To Cynthia's stupefaction Geoff was quite cheerful this morning. It was true that he looked as if he had not slept, that he avoided her eyes when he spoke to her; but his congratulations to Ben were apparently sincere; he wished the girl every happiness in a voice that did not tremble.

Had he thought the matter over and decided to make the best of it? Cynthia caught herself up as the implication of that thought reached her. What reason had she to believe that her engagement to Ben Sutton or any other man mattered to Geoff save as a subject of friendly interest?

"It's your abominable vanity that's disappointed," she scolded herself. "He's probably delighted at the idea of your leaving Denver."

Well, that was that. Everybody in the house knew of her engagement now, and everything was settled. Along about two o'clock last night she had entertained some foolish idea of saying something sweet and comforting to Geoff, but it seemed that condolences weren't in order.

The door-bell rang and two minutes after she was reading the night letter from Tenny's father.

Mr. Montague had married suddenly, it seemed ("Marriage seems to be in the air," Geoff observed), and was leaving for India to be gone two years. He and the new Mrs. Montague would stop off to see Tenny and to make arrangements for her care while they were gone.

"While they are gone?" It was Ben Sutton's surprised voice. "You mean to say they won't take the child with them?"

Cynthia in her turn looked surprised. "To India? Why, it would be the ruin of Tenny's health. Mr. Montague knows better than that."

"But—he was genuinely puzzled—"Does he expect you to make arrangements for her school?"

"If her father doesn't take her with him she'll have to be put in a boarding school, won't she?"

At that Tenny gave a cry of anguish and ran to Cynthia, clutching her madly, shaking from head to foot. Cynthia soothed her with hand and voice.

"There, darling, there! Mr. Sutton just doesn't understand, that's all."

But Tenny was beyond reasoning with. With a child's unerring instinct she had caught Sutton's real meaning. Cynthia was going to live with him, and he didn't want Tenny to come, too! Cynthia bent over her distressfully.

"Tenny—Can't you trust Cynthia? Tenny, darling—"

It was Geoff who came to the rescue. He picked Tenny up bodily and carried her into the parlor.

"Now listen, Tenny! You're not going to a boarding school, do you get that? Not—under—any—circumstances!"

She flung her arms about his neck, bedewing his collar with her tears.

"Cynthia promised—Cynthia promised," she sobbed.

"If Cynthia promised, then you're all right," he assured her. "She's never broken a promise yet, has she? And here's mine to add to hers. You'll go to a boarding school only over my dead body! You see," he went on conversationally, "I've been in 'em myself and I know what they're like. All right for children that haven't any fathers or Cynthias or Geoff's, but utterly out of the question for you."

Her thin arms held him in a strangling embrace.

"If—if Cynthia goes to live with—with Mr. Sutton—you—you'll keep me with you?"

He took her face between his hands and looked straight into her eyes. "I give you my word of honor I will, Tenny!"

Meanwhile Ben had touched Cynthia's arm and motioned with his head toward the library.

"Shall we go in there and talk this over?"

She followed him, almost as excited and frightened as Tenny. If he had never entered her mind that Ben might consider he was acquiring a family quite large enough without adding this child.

But to let Tenny go! Cynthia said, and honestly believed, that she could think no more of the child if she were her own. Somehow those months of battling with the disease which threatened the frail body had seemed to make her Cynthia's. She saw now how false was the security in which she had rested. Anything might threaten it.

Mr. Montague's remarriage, her own prospective one, a return of the lung condition which had so frightened them when Tenny first came.

"Ben, you wouldn't—wouldn't let her stay with us?"

"Cynthia, dear—think! Tenny is nothing to me—cannot be very much to you, though I know you're fond of the child! We're—I don't mean to remind you unduly, sweet, but still it must be considered—we're planning a pretty big household as it is."

"I know!" she said proudly.

"Cynthia, don't speak like that! I'm glad to have them all—gladder than I can say. But there's Benji—I must consider Benji."

She looked at him piteously. "I was thinking what a nice playmate Tenny would be for him!"

He shook a smiling head. "Cynthia, Tenny's not a child I'd want Benji to be with very much! She's emotional, excitable. Look at that scene this morning, for example. She—"

"But, Ben! The child was frantic! She thought she was going to be put back to a school!"

"And that's exactly where she ought to be, if you'll forgive my saying so, dear. She needs discipline."

"She needs no such thing! She's had altogether too much of it in her short life now. She needs love and care and a home. She—"

"We'll get nowhere talking like this, Cynthia," he told her gently. "I don't consider the child an advisable companion for Benji. She's not related to you, you're under no obligation whatever to look after her."

"But it's not a question of obligation. It's a question of Tenny! She needs me. I'm so glad her new mother won't be back for two years. By then Tenny'll be older, she can bear the separation from me better—"

A stubborn look settled about his mouth. "The separation is going to be at once, Cynthia. I'll put off going back to New York until this Mr. Montague comes, and I'll explain to him that you and I are to be married in April and he must make arrangements for his child now—"

For almost an hour the discussion went on. Ben was patient, tolerant, but unyielding. At the end of the hour Cynthia handed him back his ring with the brief announcement that if it came to choosing between Tenny's health and happiness for the next two years and marrying him, she chose Tenny.

If she had expected this announcement to move Ben from his position she was disappointed.

"You're showing me a side of your nature that I haven't seen before," he said. "Cynthia, my dear!" His eyes softened and he took a step toward her. "I do love you, even if I can't let you have your way in this. It's impossible for us to take the child."

"I know." She gave a quick nod. She was a little breathless as though she'd escaped from some unknown danger. "It's all right, Ben. It's much, much better to have found this out than to wait until we were married. Why I'd even planned to send Benji and Tenny to dancing school together; to give him the responsibility of being a brother to her."

His mouth set again. "But I couldn't allow Benji—"

"Of course you couldn't! That's just what I'm saying. Isn't it lucky we found out how we both feel? I must go to Tenny now. She won't be fit to go to school today after all that crying." She opened the door and slipped out, nor turned to give him a backward glance as she went in search of Tenny.

She found the child asleep in Geoff's arms, completely exhausted with her recent emotion. Cynthia's heart beat a little faster as she stood there looking at the two. Tenny's arms were still clasped about Geoff's neck, his lips touched her hair. Her relaxed little body rested against him trustfully. Once she sighed and murmured: "You promised, Geoff!" and he said clearly: "I promised, Tenny!" and she sank back into tired slumber.

CHAPTER XI

Christmas.

THE Christmas rush was on in earnest. The extra clerk Cynthia had engaged to help while Ben Sutton was in Denver stayed on.

Cynthia, busy with a querulous woman heard a familiar voice behind her.

"Certainly, madam! This is genuine Sandwich glass, priced this low for today only. Two plates? I doubt if we can break the set, but I'll inquire. Rather a pity not to take the six, don't you think? So few people own six Sandwich glass plates.—Ah! I think you're very wise, madam! Thank you!"

She deserted the querulous woman and came quickly to him.

"Geoff Enloe, what are you doing here?"

"Selling Christmas goods," he said serenely.

"Please go home, Geoff. You're not needed here."

"You never were more mistaken in your life! Don't bother me, Cynthia. I'm busy. Got to sell that fat woman a couple of paper knives and a calendar."

Dinner time came and went and no one dared to leave for the meal. Last minute customers dashed in and out in breathless haste. One frantic man had a long list and confessed that he had forgotten all about his shopping until this minute.

"Anything—give me anything?" he begged Cynthia. "Here's a list of their names—sister, niece, nephews—the whole lot. Just wrap up anything you think might be suitable."

"How much had you thought of spending?" Cynthia inquired.

He took a billfold from his pocket and handed her two twenty-dollar bills.

FIRST FLOOR BEING LAID AT NEW ACADEMY BUILDING

The brick laying has been suspended on the Academy building for a few days to allow for the construction of the first floor. It is expected that the bricklayers will resume work early next week. The steel work is progressing rapidly, the frame work showing the outline of the new building quite plainly at the rear half of the work.

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

L. A. Edwards, Pastor
11:00 Morning Worship, with sermon by the pastor. His subject will be, "A Projected Life."

Many men all through their business and professional careers cherish thoughts of projecting their lives beyond the grave.

Some hope to do this by establishing business enterprises that will continue to bear their name out into the world; while others would relive through their children.

Before the cross of Calvary robbed Jesus of his physical life he had already laid plans for the projection of that life. We shall think of that organism and the place we may have in it.

Grass is not injured by watering when the sun is shining. Frequent light sprinklings, though, do more harm than good. An occasional thorough soaking is the proper sort of watering, gardeners say.

A NOVELTY THESE DAYS

A young horse, frightened passing cars, reared up, caught foot in the front chain, and over on his side, tying up traffic the foot of Blake Hill for minutes Wednesday evening motorists congregated to lend assistance. After some difficulty the horse was unhitched from mate and the load of hay they were drawing, her foot extricated, she got up apparently none the worse for her antic.

Mr. and Mrs. Roger Sloane, daughter, June, were the guests Mrs. G. B. Hapgood and family week.
